The Maritime Area Regulatory Authority (MARA) : Environmental Concern Regarding the Potential Impact on Vertigo angustior Arising from a Proposed Survey Licence for Uisce Éireann.

Dear Sir/Madam,

I wish to formally bring to the attention of the Maritime Area Regulatory Authority my knowledge of the presence of Vertigo angustior (narrow-mouthed whorl snail) on my land, and to express my serious concerns regarding the potential environmental impact that may arise should MARA grant a survey licence to Uisce Éireann in the relevant area.

I am concerned that survey activities, including any associated site access, ground disturbance, vegetation clearance, equipment installation or other intrusive investigations, could adversely affect this species and its natural habitat.

Given the ecological importance of protecting this species and the sensitivity of its habitat, I believe that its presence must be fully considered before any licence is granted or any survey activities are permitted to proceed.

I respectfully request that MARA take this information into account as part of its assessment of the licence application and ensure that an appropriate ecological assessment is undertaken to establish the presence, extent and vulnerability of the species and its habitat within the potentially affected area.

I further request that no survey licence be granted, or that no survey activities be permitted to proceed, until the potential impacts on Vertigo angustior and its habitat have been properly investigated and the necessary environmental safeguards have been established.

My intention in making this submission is to ensure that the presence of this species is formally acknowledged and that its natural habitat is protected from any avoidable damage or disturbance arising from the proposed survey works.

I would appreciate written confirmation that this submission has been recorded and will be considered in MARA's assessment of the application.

Yours faithfully,
